

DEFUNCT CAT HELD BY RED TAPE IN SWELL FLAT

Three Departments in
Snarl While Very Dead
Feline Gets Deader.

When a cat becomes too defunct for further usefulness, to whom does it belong? This question is agitating three departments of the city of New York. The cat is becoming more and more defunct every minute, and a certain fashionable apartment house in West Fifty-sixth street is threatened with an exodus, particularly from the rear apartments, which are more interested in the question as time goes by. In the mean time the three departments are very busy discussing their rights and duties in the matter. Each says the other is right.

The Health Department declares that any apartment house with less than ten families in it is outside its jurisdiction in the matter of removing such a defunct cat. The Tenement House Department declares, by all the seven sections of the law in such cases made and provided, that the Board of Health must take charge of the case, and both departments say it is up to the Building Department to decide.

Cat in Status Quo.
In the mean time the matter of the apartment house does not dare to remove the cause of all this mix-up, because another law provides serious punishment for such a move.

A clean-up of these particular kinds about 185 in all—in a variety of fashionable models, including Swedes, lawns, flannels, etc. Garments that have been selling regularly from $22 to $28, will be offered in this sale at the remarkably low price of

with one of the seven sections, which provides that a tenement house is any building occupied as a residence by three or more separate families, who live as families, with separate establishments therein.

The Health Department pointed to a ruling which it had made in this special case, that no family could be considered as having a separate establishment therein unless it does its own washing, and that unless at least ten families live there the house is not subject to the jurisdiction of the Board of Health in the matter of removing deceased pets.

When last heard from the Tenement House Department was maintaining a dignified silence and holding its nose while waiting for the vacation season to end and the return of the City Club to its business of running the municipality, and the cause of all the trouble was getting more lonesome every minute.
